Q: jQuery.on() problem with radio button I am working on a little slider and I was using .bind() for the focus, blur and change events because there are several other (non-radio) inputs in the page. But now I need to add the focusout events to the radio buttons and my function seems not to be working. Here is a fiddle : My fiddle contains two radio buttons in a group. The first is active by default. You can select the other one with the arrow and his value is removed from the array. When you click on the active button, it returns to its previous value. If I don't use the .on() function with focusout it works perfectly. Why doesn't it work with .on()? A: on the radio group `$('.radio-group input[type="radio"]').on('`
