Anais Nin meets the American writer Henry Miller in Paris in 1931. She keeps a diary of her sexual awakening, which includes Henry and his wife June. Henry tells her about his early childhood, about his family, about his parents (they committed suicide and now he lives with his mother and stepfather). He talks about his adventures during his life, mostly about how he fucked his mistresses, or about his girlfriends. He also talks about his sexual hallucinations and fantasies associated with pornographic films. About how, as a child, he sneaked into his father's office, where pornographic films were kept, and reviewed them.
