The nature of hosting really is that you have to be great at what you do to succeed, and being invited to host is no guarantee of a successful campaign, or even a decent experience. There will be times that the host is a power gamer. It is not a scam - we just play extremely fast, and will likely win almost every game we host. What we do require of you is to be engaged with us for the entire campaign. We expect you to be friendly, engaged, and helpful at all times. We expect you to be present for the duration of the campaign, and don't expect you to show up at all times during the course of the campaign. Ideally, we will even have some of you show up for every game. If you are willing to put the effort into it, then it will be a very memorable experience for us, and for you. For the full list of host criteria, see the post here. About This ContentThis one's for you Elderly & Veteran Train Simmers. Contents Consulting an Advisor Visit or start a free discussion thread in the Feedback forum thread on FGCwiki to get suggestions for what to talk about, who to talk to, and what parts of the Guide to "2095" are most needed. Then, using the tips you get, go to the relevant section of Fantasy Grounds or select a concept and talk to a note-taker. Together, you can discuss a role that you need to fill, what to expect, how you'll deal with the feel of the setting, how the game will feel different, what you might experience, and how to best tackle it in real life, online, or sandbox play. Either way, your feedback is invaluable! And if you are ever just curious, or want to find out more about a piece of equipment or power you don't know about, you can ask for it by posting a topic in one of the Feedback forums. Beyond this forum, I recommend also consulting the official (PC) FGC wiki site for more information. This section lists general content in the unfinished "The World in '2095'" article, which is still under construction. Read the article for the basics on the technology that will come into use, and the game's history and background. (Updated 23-Jan-2010; most information is now available.)
