Q: How to get the y-position of a child within a parent div I have a parent div with overflow hidden. Within the div is a child div. I need to get the y-position of the child.

var height = document.getElementById('parent').style.height;
console.log("height is " + height);
console.log("getElementById('parent') is " + getElementById('parent').getElementsByName("div")[0]); console.log("getElements

ByTagName('div')[0].offsetTop is " + getElementByTagName('div')[0].offsetTop); console.log("getElementsByTagName('div')[0].offsetTop-height is " + getElementByTagName('div')[0].offsetTop-height); I tried, but not able to get the y-position of the child. My Outputs are: height is 800px getElementById('parent') is .
getElementByTagName('div')[0] is [object HTMLDivElement].
getElementByTagName('div')[0].offsetTop is null. getElementByTa

gName('div')[0].offsetTop-height is undefined. A: getElementByTagName('div')[0].offsetTop-height is undefined is correct.

You should select the child first:

const parent = document.getElementById('parent');
const child = parent.children[0];
console.log(child.offsetTop);

#parent { height: 400px; overflow: hidden; width: 500px; background: red; }

For this you need a node, that has child nodes (like div). A: I think that the Formation of radicals from laccase oxidized carbon nanotubes in an aqueous environment. The radical reactivity of oxidized single-walled carbon nanotubes (SWCNTs) with thiols was investigated in the presence of laccase, an enzyme reported to oxidize SWCNTs. Reactions of laccase-oxidized SWCNTs with thiols were monitored by the laser-induced photocatalytic reduction of Cr(VI). Product analysis based on laser-induced fluorescence and mass spectrometry indicates that oxidation by laccase produces reactive oxygen species (ROS) from the nanotube surface that can be trapped by thiols. The trapping, subsequent bleaching, and formation of ROS yield hydroxyl radicals, which can diffuse to, and cause bleaching of, nearby aromatic sulfur-containing chromophores. The oxidized SWCNTs exhibited significantly more radical-induced degradation than a similar quantity of oxidized carbon black, under identical conditions. A is one of the most terrifying, heart-breaking and emotional things in your life. It is almost inevitable to experience at some time in our lives. Because of that, I wish I could give you some tips and tricks to have a positive experience with A, but there are no easy answers. The only thing I can tell you is that you will cope with it. “You will not fail – but you might get terribly hurt.” — Tara Brach, Radical Acceptance: Embracing Your Life with the Heart of a Buddha You can make it easier, though. 1. emotional needs and what we need to heal. Don't let your emotions run away from you. You want to feel, don't you? It is your way of getting the toxicity out of your body. Allow yourself to feel, no matter how much pain or hurt it brings. Don't ignore it. It will make it worse. Crying is self-care. Your body is telling you what is going on in your life. That is what it is there for. Don't ignore it and don't be afraid to cry. Imagine your heart feels
