Q: Rails custom bootstrap carousel and jquery I have a carousel in my app with items loaded in. It's basically a page like life.com. In my nav I have an item that says Recently Updated. When the user clicks this item I want the carousel to change to show the latest article. The articles are being loaded in by AJAX. The latest articles are stored in the database in a table called Recent_posts. When the carousel changes to show the new articles, I want to match up the recently updated row in this table with the carousel and tell the carousel to show the article with the id of recent_posts with the corresponding index. The carousel is called id="recent_articles" Here is the code for my carousel:

Niantic Inc. Tue, 26 Feb 2018 10:00:00 +0000 Cygames, We will now be updating the Niantic Open Beta Beta to the latest version in our test and once testing has been complete, it will enter the beta period. Once inside the beta period, we will of course contact you with any pending issues as well as upcoming changes or features.

The Niantic Open Beta Beta has reached the testing phase of the Iron Mole Update which will be officially implemented on February 12th at 00:00 UTC. The Iron Mole Update will be available to players all over the world that have installed the latest version of the Niantic AR app. This will mark the official release of the Iron Mole update that was previously incomplete due to two main reasons. The first being that we were still finalizing the system requirements, and in particular the size of the download for these updates, this new update will be significantly smaller in terms of file size. Additionally, we had implemented some minor changes and were testing them when the players reported some users having experienced issues. After going back to the complete updates we have made some changes that solved these issues along the way and the update will be able to offer a smooth and stable experience and it will be even more attractive for players.

We hope you enjoy your time inside this Closed Beta and have fun and thanks for your patience on our side. For informations regarding this new update phase, go to Posted, post news and events to the web, share your photos and gain access to exclusive discounts, Tue, 29 Sep 2018 15:19:28 +0000 didn't think GD was 2x more after After)

I had a single player game at the beginning of August, and I came back after a few months to find that not only did I need to go and purchase an SD card to replace the one I lost because I took it out to run a test patch, but I needed to go and purchase a mouse pad.

So, I purchased a mouse, and I'm left with a working track pad!

It's fine, and I love it more than I could have hoped and more than I ever would have wanted. But, after using it, I noticed that it sends fewer clicks and cursor changes than the game or the mouse in the game do. Usually I end up clicking a little to the left, but it's only slight. And when I moved away from the mouse, it clicked a little further to the left.

It's not bad, but if they were able to solve that peripheral problem, it would certainly be an improvement.

At first, I thought it must be because I switched peripherals, but even after using the same one, I'd get the same problem when I switched to the new mouse. So even after replacing the USB cable and that doesn't change.

It's strange. I thought I was doing something wrong. Now I've looked around at all my other peripherals and I still can't find anything. In fact, even my backlit keyboard has the same little problem.
