The Patient Assessment of Constipation Symptoms and Signs (PAC-SYM) questionnaire is a new patient-reported outcome measure of constipation symptoms. The objectives of this study were to examine the validity and responsiveness of the PAC-SYM in a UK population. A cross-sectional validation study was undertaken with a subset of patients who participated in a randomized, controlled, open-label study of cholestyramine for the treatment of irritable bowel syndrome with constipation. At baseline, patients reported on the PAC-SYM and other pertinent information on the preceding week. They also reported on their overall health state (EQ-5D-3L), quality of life (Wexner Bowel Diary), bowel evacuation, and incontinence, and provided additional comments on the PAC-SYM. The PAC-SYM is a five-item subscale that measures constipation symptoms of straining, lumpiness/hard stool, sensation of incomplete evacuation, sensation of blockage, and satisfaction with bowel evacuation. Good internal consistency (Cronbach's alpha
