Hubert and series boss Bruno Michel claimed last year that their team had been unfairly treated by the FIA and missed out on the 2015/16 season due to a change in the regulations that prioritised customer cars over works entries. Although Michel has expressed confidence this year that F3 would race on track, he revealed to Autosport at Le Mans that the F3 programme would be more focused on a developmental series. "I don't want to do more than I'm capable of because F3 already takes up a lot of time," he said. "We need to get a really good structure, so that everyone knows what they have to do." When asked if a number of teams had not returned because they did not see the development opportunities that F3 offers, Michel responded: "When we do a championship, it's a long-term project. For us it's not to do F3 for one or two years." Hubert, meanwhile, has been confirmed at Double R for 2016, with a single-seater role at Rockingham to start the season. He admitted to Autosport that he would also need to adjust to a change of teams and said that he had been surprised by the news but was "very happy" to be at Double R. "I was surprised when they told me a few weeks ago, because I had just done testing with a different team, so it was a bit difficult to accept," Hubert said. "It's the first time I've been in a team with new people, so I'll try to get to know them. "I'll try to get to know the mechanics, and the team, and the engineers. "
