Sebastian Adams - Vox Webinar: Creating voice-first content is hard. Sure, it is the way to go in a world where anyone can record a video and publish it on Facebook, but is that the right approach? Do we actually need a separate motion picture industry, when we have such a powerful medium as the written word? It turns out, there is a way, and the answer is voice-first content. In this webinar, we'll explain what voice-first content is, what the fundamental building blocks are, why you should care about it, and what you need to know about it. The content of this webinar was originally produced by Vox Video and is used by permission. Grab a pen and paper, we're going to start with some definition, and then break it down. Voice-first vs Image-First First things first, voice-first content has two big properties: 1. It's independent of media. It's not what you would usually describe as image-first content, but with voice-first content, the content is what is important. 2. Voice-first content is time-sensitive. People are hungry for content. They want to consume content, fast. And we are so conditioned to having to search, filter, click, and consume, that we assume the ideal thing to consume is a combination of a piece of video and a link. However, when you use voice-first content, it's not the content that's important; it's the voice that's important. As Tim Ferriss says, your content doesn't win the game; the voice does. The fundamental building blocks of voice-first content. Now it's time to dig in and say what the fundamental building blocks are, of voice-first content. There are five "C"s, and they

Early recurrence of hypertension following a positive response to clonidine. A case of early recurrence of hypertension following a positive response to clonidine is presented. Two weeks following withdrawal of clonidine, systolic and diastolic blood pressures remained elevated. However, when clonidine was re-initiated in an attempt to reduce blood pressure further, hypertension again responded and a systolic blood pressure of 180 mm Hg was attained. Both clonidine and reserpine were discontinued, and mianserin alone was re-introduced. Within a few weeks this also failed to reduce the blood pressure to within normal limits, and clonidine was re-initiated in a triple combination with reserpine and methyldopa. This produced a good response and the blood pressure was within normal limits 24 hours after discontinuing clonidine. Clonidine and reserpine were again discontinued and mianserin alone was re-introduced, producing a good response, but again hypertension
