* Lightroom: If you also have Adobe Lightroom, I recommend that you use Lightroom to process and transfer your images. Lightroom is extremely powerful and an excellent tool for organizing and processing your digital images. See Chapter 9 for more on using Lightroom. Photoshop is an image-editing program that comes bundled with Lightroom. You use both programs to produce and edit images.

A rapid, simple, and specific assay for creatine phosphokinase in serum by using a combination of 3-mercaptopyropionic acid and o-phthalaldehyde. A simple, rapid, and sensitive assay for the determination of creatine phosphokinase (CPK) in serum is described. An ultraviolet measurement of the combined formation of CPK and beta-N-oxalylaminoethylphosphonic acid yields a decrease in absorbance at 340 nm which is a suitable method for the determination of CPK in serum. The assay can be performed with initial concentrations of CPK as low as 0.005 U/mL. Since the reaction proceeds in the thermodynamically unfavorable direction, a selective reaction is obtained. The decrease in absorbance is linear from 0.005 U/mL to 12 U/mL. The method is very sensitive, and the result was in excellent agreement with those obtained with established enzymatic methods.

Patient safety in imaging environments: how can hospitals and radiologists collaborate to improve patient care and experience? This paper will examine ways in which the work of a hospital's Department of Imaging and an academic radiology department can work collaboratively, in order to achieve consensus on best practices related to patient safety. The paper will look at risk assessments and propose strategies for managing risk through the implementation of best practice. The particular objective is to seek collaboration between these two hospitals, where one is an academic teaching hospital and the other is a non-academic tertiary referral centre, to identify the challenges to patient safety in radiology, and to develop programmes to address them.
