Q: Sublime Text 2: Repeat a string with ANSI colors I have a task at hand where I need to repeat a string of text, and want to do so with ANSI color (built-in console with a default or specific one). How do I do that? In the command line, I know I can do it with printf and ANSI escapes. For example: printf -1 "%{o}" hello In sublime text, I've tried to create a simple macro with either { and }, but it doesn't work. I know it's because sublime is interpreting the characters as characters instead of what they mean in ANSI color. I tried the "sublime-build" way. Define a small Python script with what I want to repeat and try it. # Read up on ANSI escape codes here: # print("Hello") The problem is, it won't take the escape codes. So, if I try and run the code, nothing happens in sublime. print("Hello\033[1;31m") Does not work either. This is the only thing I could get to work, which takes the escape codes and prints them in the console. import sublime import os sublime.load_settings("OSX-v2") path = sublime.load_settings("Packages/User/ansi_escape.sublime-settings") if path: print("\033[1;31m") sublime.set_layout(0, "Packages/User/ansi_escape.sublime-settings") else: print("\033[1;31m") sublime.set_layout(0, "osx.sublime-settings") print("\033[1;31m") Any ideas? A: I figured it out using this: import sublime import os sublime.load_settings("OSX-v2") path = sublime.load_settings("Pack
