Don't take the following list as a straight comparison between the two products. I don't intend to make a defense of Photoshop. I simply list the best features and why I think Photoshop Elements deserve to be in the same class as Photoshop (and other graphic editing apps). Components of Photoshop If you learn Photoshop from scratch and want to understand all the features, you will be frustrated. There is too much to learn. I will list only those features I find essential, and the ones I use the most. The most important component of Photoshop is the Content Panel. I don't want to go into deep details on how to use it. I will assume you know it but I'll simply list the most important features and explain why you should use it: and what it does. Text and object editing It can edit text (text layer, type, logo, symbols). You can type normally, copy and paste, delete, select all, cut, paste, cut, paste, undo and redo. You can also apply fonts and edit their properties. You can set text to uppercase, lowercase and capitalize. You can set the text color and the size. You can also change the text style (bold, italic and many others). It can edit graphics, images and layers. You can rotate, flip and mirror. You can set the position, rotation and size of objects on the canvas. You can add, move, copy and delete objects. It can also extract or delete objects from a document. It can change the blending modes between transparency and color. It can create outlines, paths, guides, rectangles, circles, ellipses, bezier curves and much more. Editing vector graphics It can open files created in Adobe Illustrator, Photoshop, Illustrator and more. It can edit shape, path, curve, pattern, line, composite and symbol objects. It can edit the properties of a shape, curve, pattern and symbol. You can save and export files in EPS and other vector formats. Photoshop Elements has just the same features. All the features described above have versions in Photoshop and in Photoshop Elements. The only differences are in the interface. Raster editing It can edit bitmap and raw files. It can edit the brightness, contrast, saturation, hue and more. It can work with images already a681f4349e

Kinetics of the complexes formed between DNA and quinaldine mustard analogues. The kinetics of the reactions of DNA with several N-2-chloroethyl-N-2-diethylaminoethylamine quinaldine mustard (CEDDAMQ) analogues have been examined using absorption and fluorescence spectroscopy. The reactions have been found to follow second-order kinetics with respect to both mustard and DNA concentrations and to be second-order in the concentration of the nucleobase in each case. The apparent rate constants for the chloroethyl group, methyl group, and ethyl group containing analogues are  $9 \times 10^3$ , 1.4, and  $1.8 \times 10^3$  dm<sup>3</sup> mol<sup>-1</sup> s<sup>-1</sup>, respectively. The magnitude of these values, as well as the chromophore pK for the analogues, suggest that the reaction begins with the nucleophilic attack of the mustard on a methylene bridge of the base (nucleophile) and proceeds to the end product.  $u p p o s e - 3 4 * w + 7 * w + 1 1 0 9 8 9 = 0 . Q: How do you get another reputation for a bountied question? Suppose you have 10 reputation for the Question Bounty System. If you answered a question by 10 reputation points, you get 50 points as a reward. But if you answered a question by posting an answer that has a score of at least 10 points, you get 100 points as a reward. My question is, then, under what condition do you get 50 points? Do you get 50 points if your answer meets the conditions and is accepted? (If you get 50 points for a question that is already 10 points for the bounty, then I think that the bounty policy needs to be reviewed.) Or do you get 50 points as long as the question didn't receive any up-votes but your answer is accepted? Or do you get 50 points as long as the question hasn't been awarded a bounty? A: The conditions of your bounty are: you must have less than 200 reputation you must have posted this question within the past 50 days you may not have posted a previous question with this bounty within the last 24 hours you must have accepted an answer on this question within the past 7 days your answer must have a score of at least 10 your answer must not have been deleted your answer must contain answers to at least 2 different, older questions Therefore, you may only earn 50 points from a bounty by posting an accepted answer on an active question within the past 50 days. Organic stability for preservation of garlic in processed products. Garlic is a commonly consumed food that has a variety of health benefits. It is important to maintain the flavor and nutritional value of garlic in processed foods. The purpose of this research was to investigate the importance of stabilizing garlic in pickles, mayonnaise, and other processed foods. Organic garlic was processed with garlic powder, garlic butter, and minced garlic. Meals and sauces containing garlic were stored at 40 °C and 80 °C for 7 days. The chemical and sensory properties of processed garlic were compared to the original, unprocessed garlic. Chemical changes included a rapid increase in free amino acids at storage temperatures above 40 °C for processed garlic. Sensory panelists did not detect any off-flavor or loss of acceptability. The sensory attributes were preserved well when garlic was processed with garlic butter or garlic powder. These findings have important implications for the preservation
