Effects of an immunostimulating regimen on lymphocyte proliferation and T-helper (Th1/Th2) cytokine secretion during canine brucellosis. The course of canine brucellosis is punctuated by periods of activity and relapse, the pathogenesis of which is incompletely understood. Previous investigations have demonstrated that vaccination against Brucella can prevent relapses in naturally infected dogs. This study describes a preliminary immunomodulation therapy protocol using adjuvant therapy in an attempt to enhance cell-mediated immune responses in naturally infected dogs. Immunomodulatory effects were determined in naturally infected dogs using assays measuring lymphocyte proliferation and T-helper (Th1/Th2) cytokine secretion. Immunomodulation using an antibiotic and immunostimulatory regimen significantly increased specific blast cell proliferation. Addition of CpG oligodeoxynucleotide to the immunostimulatory regimen elicited a greater proliferation response in vaccinated dogs. This enhanced proliferation response also correlated with an increased Th1 cytokine secretion (IFN-gamma and IL-12) as compared to controls. Changes in Th2 cytokine secretion (IL-4 and IL-10) were not statistically significant. These findings suggest that adjunct therapies could improve the efficacy of vaccination and of any natural infection therapy in dogs. Weymouth, in the U.S. state of Massachusetts, is a city of more than 47,000 residents. It is located on a peninsula on the Atlantic Ocean in Massachusetts Bay at the western end of the Cape Cod peninsula. The United States Postal Service places the city under the ZIP code 02127, but the city's telephone area code is 978. The port of Weymouth is home to Weymouth Harbor, with the busy daily freight service to New Bedford. The city's beach and dunes have become important nationally in the decades since the closing of the New Bedford Iron Works on the Atlantic Ocean in the late 1980s. The area contains sand dunes that are the subject of a federal dune protection program
