LjUHNU 05/06/2017, 06:57 PM You can either reset your router by pressing the reset button for three seconds, or you can go to the administration page on your router and reset it there, as long as the reset buttons are still present. The pdf describing PowerAMC by Symantec Security Response is available for download on the ASA website. Here are some questions that you might ask about a PowerAMC event 2. Should I contact the provider of my server? Yes. If you believe your server may be infected with a virus, malware or other malicious software, you should contact your server's administrator as soon as you can. If your server is reporting a PowerAMC event, your server administrator might be able to fix the problem. If not, and if the problem cannot be fixed, you'll need to take steps to restore the server to a secure state. You can get a description of the exploit code by downloading and running PowerAMC. 3. What should I do if I am receiving a PowerAMC event? If you are receiving a PowerAMC event, try to determine what is causing the event to occur. If you determine that the event was caused by a virus, download a tool from Symantec that can detect and remove it. If the PowerAMC event was a false-positive, there is probably no malicious software on your server. If the event was a true-positive, and your server has a known vulnerability, you should contact your vendor or reseller. To determine what is causing PowerAMC to be triggered, run PowerAMC. If you encounter a report of a malicious activity, you can download the Symantec Mitigation Tool. The report can be downloaded here: Symantec Security Response recommends that you download the full report and run it. When you run the report, you should be able to see additional information, including the exploit code, the suspected malware and its serial number, and the date of detection. 0cc13bf012
