electronics components <http://bach.com/id/04/id04ass.state.com/29/2019-29/products.html>The following is a political satire. Journalists and politicians were aghast that my husband of less than a year and I went to the big game in Texas last weekend. The most common accusations ranged from, "Well, what does he know? He's been married for twelve years, he's never been married to anyone else, he doesn't know anything about football or religion or what a boy is or how to be a husband, how can he possibly know if he's seeing the real thing?" Ah, yes, good points, we got that. We also got the question of, "How can she have a child and he don't?" You do the math. The main allegation was that my husband and I were a couple of baby mamas who have this bright idea of getting pregnant and then also going to a football game in Texas, and what was that about? We were trying to be a couple, it's what real couples do. The media tried to paint us as lovers without a price tag, but we were there in the stands with the rest of the adult fans. We were being a couple, and that's good enough for us. People tried to draw a connection between polygamy and my husband and me, saying that my husband and I were, shall we say, in an emotionally and physically intimate relationship. I will say this, but just to be on the safe side: he didn't have a mustache, and he never touched me. That doesn't mean that my husband and I didn't have sex, people, and we had a great time. Another of the people who criticized us was the governor of Texas, who said, "I'm not here to judge, I'm just here to point out what a good time he's having with his wife." Someone else at the game asked us if we were a couple, I don't remember what we said, but I do remember the way the question made us pause.

The reduction potential of myoglobin (Mb) in organisms includes those of animals, plants, and algae. The denaturation of Mb protein is now widely used to determine the MgCl<sub>2</sub> effects on Mb structural integrity and bioenergetics. Greatly investigated in vitro, Mg<sup>2+</sup> plays a significant role in protein synthesis, and has been implicated in the regulation of the acute phase response, bone development, and reproduction. In addition, Mg<sup>2+</sup> is responsible for the binding of oxygen to Mb, modulating the transmembrane electrochemical gradient. Indeed, the concentration of intracellular Mg<sup>2+</sup> is determined by the balance between the generation of Mg<sup>2+</sup> ions in the mitochondria, and the extrusion of Mg<sup>2+</sup> from the cell as a result of the active transport mechanisms.

There are numerous studies which all concur in the view that Mb has a primary role in the cellular uptake of  $Mg^{2+}$  and essential metal ions. The flavonoid quercetin (Que) is one of the most widely distributed phytochemicals in the plant kingdom. The bovine lens contains high concentrations of Que. Whether there are important antioxidant properties associated with Que in the lens are of considerable interest. This study was undertaken to examine the effects of Que on the oxidative activities of the bovine lens. The optic nerve head, a region of the eye containing the photoreceptor cell bodies in the retina, is one of the principal sites of retinal blood flow. It is believed that the blood flow to the optic nerve head is responsible for nourishing the retinal ganglion cell axons and is essential for their maintenance. The erythrocyte possesses many important transport and metabolic functions. The erythrocyte membrane is able to bind and transport a variety of nutrients, hormones and ions. Recent studies have demonstrated that the rat retina exhibits considerable similarity in many structural and functional aspects with the human retina. This is true with respect to the abundance and distribution of retinal ganglion cells, distribution of retinal layers and cellular organization of the retina. The rat retina is thus a useful model for many aspects of the retina in humans. The effects of glucocorticoids on the developing
