Start with an idea or a beginning, see it through to a conclusion. There's nothing like the satisfaction of creating something from scratch, especially when it's something you've been toiling with for days on end. The most difficult part of writing a piece of work is getting started. You have the idea in your head, now all you need is the technology to make it real. It's not something you can sit around and write in one sitting, or even a few sittings, it's a long drawn out process that requires a lot of different tools to make it happen. You could end up at the end of your creative process having written out a few pages, but wanting to start something new and different. What you need to do is start again. This is where the software application Writing Ghost (RU) comes in. Writing Ghost allows you to keep your ideas, notes, chapters, outlines or even documents and present them in a format that allows you to work on it and get it finished. This can be one massive document or a piece of poetry, whether you're writing lyrics, designing an app, planning a class or simply making a story. Writing Ghost will allow you to keep everything in one central location, so you can add, edit and reorganise as you need and then get it printed out and onto a disk or given to a friend. The software application Writing Ghost is a place where you have an archive of all your ideas and notes, nothing is saved to the internet in a cloud data centre. It is a place where you can create and edit full-length documents without fear of losing anything. This application comes with a full-length document management system, allowing you to make sure that everything you work on is saved to this one central location. That way, you never have to worry if there's something stored that you may need for reference or to be able to carry on with a project. Writing Ghost allows you to keep all of your data secure and safe. Writing Ghost has also been designed to allow you to manage and organise your time, work on parts of a project or write a story as you go along. This is when the application can help, it will organise all of your idea and the list of tasks you need to complete and put everything in a series of tabs and sections, allowing you to work on them as you need to.
