Q: Node.js Fetch - Try once, fail, retrieve the JSON I'm trying to get the job done using Node.js (I haven't worked with Node before), so I'll try and be as clear as possible. I want to use the Fetch API to try and retrieve an existing JSON, and after the network has failed, to try and retrieve it again. However, in the second attempt, I want to tell it to retrieve the JSON instead of failing again. I'm aware that I can put this logic into a catch clause, but I don't know how to get my code to continue to work after the first call has failed. Any pointers in the right direction would be great. Here's my code: `var fetch = require('node-fetch'); const mainUrl = 'url'; fetch(mainUrl) .then(res => res.json()) .catch(err => { fetch(mainUrl) .then(res => res.json()) })` Thanks in advance for any help you can provide!

A: As the fetch docs say: Once the initial request is made, subsequent requests will use that same context. So this will cause the same request to be sent again every time. You can simply save the result of the first request and use it fetch(mainUrl
