Thanks A: This is known as an OR-condition. The query is true if it finds at least one row with country_code = Australia, country_code = China or country_code = India. The recommended index is: country_code This will find all records where the country_code matches the row or the country_code = Australia, or country_code = China, or country_code = India. A longtime AMR Corp. program could soon go up in smoke, as the

- Support Tables, indexes, triggers etc. - Synchronize data of heterogeneous databases. - Choose between three synchronization modes such as Compare only where no data is changed, One-Way Synchronization where you have to specify which records or data cells you want to skip and Two-Way Synchronization where you can move changes across to any database. Omega Sync main features: Compare all databases in one step (including tables, indexes, triggers and forms) Compare any row with any row or cell in any database. One-way synchronization where no data is changed in the target database. Two-way synchronization where you can move changes from the source to the target. Support heterogeneous databases (data can be presented in ODBC style or SQL style) Support tables, indexes, triggers and forms Can be run in both safe and non-safe mode.The prior art includes various types of carriage conveyers used in conjunction with conveyors that move articles. Typically, the carriage conveyer is carried by the conveyor. The conveyor and carriage conveyer are controlled by a processor such as a microprocessor which is typically located remotely from the conveyor. Such control may be accomplished by manually entering signals into the computer. In order to automate this control function, the conveyor may be connected to a programmable logic device, for example, a microprocessor controlled programmable logic device such as a FLEX 1071 programmable logic controller manufactured by the assignee of the present invention. With this arrangement, the conveyor and the carriage conveyer may be controlled by a single microprocessor located remotely from the conveyors. The operator may program the instructions to the microprocessor from a remote location. The carriage conveyer is also typically driven by a microprocessor in response to signals received from the microprocessor. The microprocessor is also used to monitor the weight of the articles on the conveyer and on the carriage conveyer so that operator intervention may be used to correct for any deviation of the weight from the weight of the articles which can result if a part of the carriage conveyer is not properly engaged with the carriage. This remote control of the conveyor allows for more reliable operation of the conveyor. However, it can be expensive to manufacture conveyors that are more reliable because they must be strong enough to withstand the abuse encountered by conveyors. The central location of the microprocessor may also be a source of reliability problems. In large manufacturing operations, more than
