To determine whether multidrug resistance-associated protein 1 (MRP1) is directly involved in hepatic chloroquine transport, we studied the effects of MRP1 expression and MRP1 inhibition in rat hepatocytes. Chloroquine transport was studied in primary cultures of hepatocytes from sham-operated rats (control), chloroquine pretreated rats (chloroquine), and in transfected rat hepatocytes that expressed MRP1 (MDR1-4). The effects of specific MRP1 inhibitors on chloroquine transport were also studied in transfected hepatocytes. Both chloroquine pretreatment and transfection with MDR1-4 significantly increased hepatocyte chloroquine uptake. Transfection with MDR1-4 also significantly increased chloroquine transport in
