also a web site called youtube will have podcasts and you can take a look there in the video section to see what i meant by it is about rationally discussing like a podcast or a radio show. but these are like a web site version of it. and this is a podcast which focuses on how to share the ration and do rational stuff over the internet, like a chat room that is totally anonymous but not really, so you can ask your friends who dont even know you about your ideas and they can ask you. it is a very useful tool in my life. thanks for your time. bye. i started a blog called freedom nomodes because it is supposed to be a place of rational freedom where you can learn how to live a freedom lifestyle which includes both moral integrity and adherence to real facts, not to principles of what you want people to believe and what you want to think, but to what is actually true. i will not tolerate any forms of oppression and when i see a person trying to oppress others i will help them and help those who will suffer under them and i will even help people who try to oppress me, because it is often the people who do not have power that suffer the most under oppression. i think that if we understand the basic reasons why we should not do harm to others and how to minimize harm, then the people who are in powerful positions should also be able to internalize them to the point where they never put people in harm. hacker ethicists think about ethics from a god-eye perspective: if i were omnipotent, i would want you to help me help others to avoid suffering. if i were omnipotent, i would probably also want you to work for the planet rather than me. however, i am not omnipotent. i am imperfect, prone to avoid making the world a better place through my actions. therefore, i need you to keep me from causing harm even if that costs you something. if i were omnipotent, i might not need to care about you at all. 5ec8ef588b
