He urged Ukrainians to be strong and told them they will fight back, and he predicted: Ukraine will be free and many terrorists will be punished. He said, other nations will follow Russias lead, hopefully including Russia. I condemn the actions of the Russian government and I am rooting for every Ukrainian to win. The Russian president concurred with Solovievs assessment, thanking him for a good job, but adding, the West will have to be persuaded to fight alongside us. If they do not, we can not be satisfied as we have a responsibility to help Ukraine. The intelligentsia of the Ukraine is educated. These are the intellectual and educated people that the struggle against Russian invasions and terror are fought and won. They are the people who invented mathematics, medicine, architecture and other sciences. And they are educated people who are cultured, who enjoy music and art. Also, these are the people who are against the repression. Russian corruption starts within the very core of the government and universities that lead to a total frustration of the people. Even many politicians are educated. Those are the educated people who have the right to choose the government, to rule themselves and to be free of the oppression in the country. I do not agree with those reports, because it's simply not true. What I can tell you is that more than 20 years ago the Security Service of Ukraine revealed that the Russian nationalists occupied city halls and police stations in parts of eastern Ukraine. This is how they broke the May 1, 1994 agreement. After that, the Russian nationalists began the process of separating the territories of the Western Oblast. And since the beginning of the First War, the Ukrainian forces have not left the occupied areas.

A great credit to my memory! It's one thing that countries will burn, yes, but it is something else that they will die for it. The Ukraine has become a national thing here in Italy, a nation. Though the story goes, I don't believe the U.S. Secretary of State, John Kerry, might have been the one who succeeded in convincing Ukraine, a nation, not to believe the Russians - not to follow the evidence. It's still possible to believe in American exceptionalism, but everyone is questioning the old boyish fervor.

For many, America is seen as a spoiled child that won't listen to anyone with so much as a suggestion. To that point, though, you might have noticed the headline the NYT was out with today - a thing just for obvious reasons that others need to see. Bob Corker, for the Republicans, was saying basically that Mr. Trump doesn't know who he is talking to. The whole thing is something that makes the head spin, the U.S. and the West a dangerous place in 2015. Think of it this way - if someone had a great deal of money, and bought a bunch of weapons of mass destruction, some of them would be nuclear weapons. This is a once-in-a-while dream for many, and of course having money and weaponry doesn't mean you'll have the technology to make things work or that you'll be able to operate effectively. Alas, the world is a little more divided, maybe too little, and no one has so much as a strong idea on how to mend it. I hope that the picture is clear - and that more is revealed on this topic. People are just not getting the cold heartedness that the U.S. has - and that it is, itself, a terrorist nation. 5ec8ef588b
