The Cessna 172BSP (SP) landing checklist is used to perform critical checks before, during, and after landing and safely secure the aircraft. It also contains best practice image for quick reference and better compliance. Use this Cessna 172 landing checklist on any mobile device, even while offline, and automatically file records in the cloud. Checklists can be switched between aircraft with ease. This allows you to keep a single checklist with you at all times and utilize it where needed. When you reach your destination, you can print the checklist and take it to a Cessna 172 service center to ensure that your airplane is ready for flight. The Cessna 172 is a light four-place, high-winged, mid-fuselage cabin, single-engine turboprop aircraft designed by Scott Aviation. It was originally designed as the Citation II and later renamed the Cessna Citation II after the design was acquired by Cessna in 1979. The Citation II was originally in production as the CT-142 – a $10.6 million low-wing, high-speed corporate jet. The FlightGear model is a luxury corporate jet for two pilots and seven passengers. With a cruising speed of only 330 KTAS, it was really intended as a competitor for high-end twin turboprops. The Citation II is the largest variant of the Cessna 172. The Citation II has a total of 4 passenger seats, a three-person pilot and co-pilot cockpit, a single-pilot cockpit, and a cargo door. It is powered by two Allison 250-C20A, four-bladed, constant-speed fans and manufactured between 1978 and 2006. If you are a student pilot, then you know that training checks are your responsibility. Of course, you can also leave your training to a Flight Instructor. However, it is quite impractical to rely on an instructor during training. Hence, when you need to conduct training checks, your only choice is to take the help of a Cessna 172 checklist. 5ec8ef588b
